Dan Fantasia Joins the United Way's Math, Science, and Technology Initiative

July 1, 2006, Wakefield, Massachusetts: Treeline Managing Partner Dan Fantasia has recently joined the United Way of Massachusetts Bay's Math, Science, and Technology Initiative. The goal of this initiative is to make jobs in science a reality for more young people. Volunteers from the life sciences, healthcare and technology industries are working together to make this happen through speaking engagements and by sponsoring site visits, etc.

In the next five years, experts predict the life sciences industry in Massachusetts has the potential to grow the economy by at least 100,000 jobs. To help prepare today's youth for tomorrow's workforce, the United Way of Massachusetts Bay launched this important initiative. It is a groundbreaking collaboration between the United Way, the healthcare/life sciences industries, and community partners. The mission of this curriculum is to foster a lifelong interest in the sciences, and to prepare young people in grades 4-12 for rewarding careers in math, science and technology-related fields.

Says Fantasia: "As the head of a company with a focus in science and technology, I see the urgency in interesting our children in these fields. I encourage anyone in the life sciences, healthcare, or technology industries to get involved with this important initiative."
